

Dean of HKU Faculty of Dentistry heads new international dental journal

Professor Lakshman Samaranayake, Dean and Chair Professor of Oral Microbiology at the HKU Faculty of Dentistry has been appointed the Editor-in-Chief of a new peer-reviewed international journal in dentistry, the "Journal of Investigative and Clinical Dentistry".

Published by Wiley-Blackwell, the Journal of Investigative and Clinical Dentistry is an Asia-focused international journal that accepts articles from all disciplines in dentistry, and is dedicated to the rapid dissemination of cutting-edge research findings in all aspects of oral and maxillofacial sciences.

The Editorial Board consists of a highly respected team of 15 associate editors covering all aspects of dental research. "Our team hopes that the new journal will make significant contributions to the worldwide community of practitioners and researchers in the dental and oral health care field," says Professor Samaranayake. "We look forward to working with Wiley-Blackwell to make this vision come to fruition."

The first issue of the Journal of Investigative and Clinical Dentistry will be published in August 2010, and the Editorial Board has already begun accepting author contributions. Authors will benefit from rapid peer review and online publication, as well as waived publication and colour charges.

For more information on the new journal and on manuscript submission procedures, log onto the journal website at <www.jicd.org>.
